4 MOTHERS, 10 CHILDREN.

These children are being brought up on Castoria. Read what the mothers say about Castoria. There is no opium, morphine or other narcotic substance in Castoria. The formula is printed on the wrapper of every bottle. It is perfectly harmless. I want to take more testimonials effective. I do not prescribe Castoria, mothers give Castoria, and Children cry for Castoria. It gives the child health and the mother rest.

"If surely that little Robbie Hale, of 33 Portland Avenue, St. Paul, was a sick, crying baby from his birth until he was given Castoria. He began to improve from the first week's trial. Has taken it before, is perfectly well, weighed 30 pounds the day he was 2 years old, and on which this picture was taken. Robbie's changed condition has caused many mothers to use Castoria. It is the best thing for babies I have ever known.
FANNIE MILLIP, Professional Nurse.
33 Portland Ave.,
St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 4, 1887.

"This is a picture of my twins, Charlie and William. It was taken when they were 2 years old. They were puny babies, and I gave them an inhalant to Castoria for their natural good health.
MRS. HERMINE BOECKEL.
1609 Lexington Ave.,
New York, May 23rd, 1887.

"I enclose you photographs of my 'triplets' 2 boys and 1 girl—Maggie, Pete and Willie. I owe their health and strength to Castoria. It was through my neighbors urgent appeals that I commenced to use, as both my boys were thin and inclined to be sickly. At present they are fat and hearty, they weigh 8, 31 and 31 pounds, and are 2 months and 7 days old.

A Unique Dinner.

NEWTON, N.J., Aug. 4.—Mr. and Mrs. Whitney's dinner last night to the British Minister and British Admiral was in every respect the most elegant and costly of the great dinners given this year. An innovation, especially for Sunday dinners, was the singing of Turpin, baritone, who put in an appearance just before 10 o'clock. The floral decorations were very beautiful, a conspicuous feature being a lily pond containing blooming lilies of different colors, six in number. The lilies were all imported from Egypt and India, and were set off by other plants. The table was decorated with passion flowers, and set off with thick maidenhair fern. There was a profusion of lotus flowers. The guests were Sir Julian and Lady Pauncefote, Vice-Admiral Watson, Ex-Governor and Mrs. Whitmore, Mrs. Paran Stevens, Mrs. S. Fish, Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Wilson, Mr. Endicott Peabody, senr., Calvin S. Brice and Mrs. Brice, Mr. and Mrs. James P. Kennerchen, Mr. McMaster, Gov. and Mrs. Carroll, Mr. T. I. Cushing, Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon.

Kemmler's Executor.

AUBURN, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Warden Durston exploded this morning a story sent out at a late hour that a mysterious delegation, presumably composed of the witnesses of the killing of Kemmler, arrived on a special train at midnight and had been hurried on to the prison. The warden was not in town last night, and when he returned on the 7 o'clock train he said no invitations to the execution had yet been issued, as the law requires three days' notice to be given to witnesses. This would appear to indicate that the execution will not occur before Thursday. Kemmler is reported to be in good health and fair spirits to-day.

A Gay Lothario, Otherwise a Scoundrel.

CHICAGO, Aug. 4.—Count Achille Vidal, who two weeks ago was nearly pounded to death by Sol Price and the latter's burly brother, received a vigorous cowhiding on Sunday evening. The punishment was received at the hands of Mrs. Price and her sister. The count, who is a notorious gallant, received a daintily written note signed "Marie," making an appointment at 7:30 o'clock. He was on hand to meet the fair unknown, when he was confronted by the two women, who began to lay on rawhides. With a shriek of pain Vidal beat a hasty and ungraceful retreat, and was closely followed by the women. A few weeks ago the Count was compelled to take a midair jump from a second story window, and later had his beauty disfigured in a fight. Until yesterday the count had disappeared from the public gaze, so had Mrs. Price, whose frisklness had caused all the trouble. Price sued for a divorce and the day after he forced the gay count to jump through a window, but it would seem that he has since patched up the difficulty with the gay Mrs. Price, and she has been restored to her old place in her husband's affections. This cowhiding may have been Mrs. Price's affidavit that she is no longer in love with the count.

Burned to Death.

TULARE, Cal., Aug. 4.—At 8 o'clock last night fire destroyed the dwelling house in West Tulare owned by Oscar Evans and occupied by two families, one of whom was in Fresno the other is feared was burned. A woman was seen to enter the house and light a lamp. A few minutes later the house was in flames. The woman has not been found. The cause of the fire it is supposed was an explosion of the lamp. The loss and insurance is unknown.

A 4000 Mile Bicycle Ride.

SACRAMENTO, Aug. 4.—Franklin E. Weaver arrived in this city this afternoon from New Haven, Conn. He left New Haven on April 21st and made the journey in easy stages, stopping for rest whenever he felt like it. He is traveling solely for pleasure and slight exercise. His ride to-day was from Auburn and he will go to San Francisco where he expects to arrive Tuesday.

Will Cut Rates.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 4.—The steamship Abyssinia, owned by the Canadian Pacific Steamship Co., is now on its way from Hong Kong to this port. The company will establish its head quarters on the Oceanic dock. In conversation with an official of the Pacific Mail Company yesterday it was learned that the threatened event of the formidable competitor did not in the least worry the company. He said "We understand the Central Pacific people are taking this step so as to reply to our advance into what they term their territory. It is known that they intend to make a cut in passenger and freight rates, but this will not disconcert us, for we will of course have to underbid their rates, no matter what they may be. Meanwhile it is quite natural to suppose that the shippers and the commercial public generally will receive the benefit of the competition, temporarily at least.

CALLED A MONOPOLY.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The Herald's Washington special says: "Dr. Cruz, minister from Guatemala, and Mr. Bain, the Guatemalan consul in this city, deny that the Pacific Mail Steamship Company has any claim on their government." Dr. Cruz said: "All this talk about the Pacific Mail Steamship Co., having made a demand on the government of Guatemala for $500,000 indemnity I believe to be wholly without foundation. The captain of the steamship Colima put the arms in question aboard a lighter at San Jose of his own free will. Later our government seized them with the consent of the United States minister as well as the agent of the steamship company. The act was perfectly regular and in accordance with article 17 of the agreement drawn up between the Pacific Mail Co., and the Guatemalian government. Even if any such demand for damages had been made I could not fail to know it in my official position, and I assure you that no such action had been taken. Let me explain to you exactly what the situation is, and the real animus by which the Pacific Mail people are actuated, said Mr. Bain. They know as well as I do they have no claim for indemnity in this matter of the steamer Colima, yet I think that some of the officers of the company may have made the remarks attributed to them, but they are angry and jealous at the success Guatemala has had in the raising of a loan of $21,000,000. Knowing as they do the uses to which that money is to be put, let me explain to you why nobody not immediately interested knows, or can ever dream, of the injustices, impositions and extortions put upon Guatemala and other Central American States by this Pacific Mail company. Why, sir, that company, because its steamship line is a monopoly, and because it has the Central railroad across the isthmus, levies a subsidy of $20,000 dollars annually from the Central American republics, of which Guatemala pays $20,000. In return for this the Pacific Mail Company treat us in the most abominable manner; we are compelled to pay $25 freight per ton for all the coffee we send from Guatemala to New York though coffee can be imported from any other part of the globe at from $4 to $12 per ton. To such extortion and injustice as this must be added the fact that our cargoes are delivered to us in a wretched condition and that we are never able to get any satisfaction from the Pacific Mail Co."

WILL BUY A PALACE.

Gould Wants to Live in the House of the Montgomerys.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The World's special from San Antonio, Texas says: A report reached here to-day from the City of Mexico that the famous and magnificent castle of Chapultepec, which was one of the grandest and most imposing structures of its kind in the world, is about to be sold to Jay Gould. The castle is owned by the Mexican government, and Gould, during his visit to that country a few months ago, made an offer it is said of $3,000,000 for it. The offer was at the time refused, but as the report now has it, the government has, after consideration, decided to accept it. If the castle is purchased Gould and family, rumor goes, will make it their winter house.

The Carlboo stage robber has evidently made his escape beyond the reach of the law. Constable Pearce has not yet returned from up the North Thompson river, but there are no great chances of his having captured the highwayman, owing to the heavily timbered country through which they had to travel, and the long start obtained by the pursued party. Mr. Hussey's visit up the country resulted in finding out that had the half-breeds who first gave chase had nerve enough to continue their search they might have captured the robber or robbers.

The Emperor was at once driven to Osborne House, and received at the entrance by the Queen, the Princess of Wales and the Duchess of Edinburgh. He wore the uniform of a British admiral. The band played German and English anthems.

The Guatemalan Chessboard.

CITY OF MEXICO, Aug. 4.—The revolution in the eastern department of Guatemala has compelled the government to turn its attention to its own affairs in Juliapa and to comparatively abandon the campaign against Salvador. The revolutionists are said to be marching on toward the port of Livingston on the Atlantic coast, with the intention of taking possession of that town. There are practically no troops in the department of Livingston save a few hundred men stationed in the barracks at the port. Livingston people in the capital are loudly clamoring for a change of the Barillos government and matters are assuming a very critical aspect. It is believed that the climax will be reached in a very short time and that President Barillos and his cabinet will have to vacate the presidency and power they now hold. Honduras has been called upon by President Barillos to furnish troops to aid Guatemala in quelling her internal troubles, but President Bogran has sent back word to Barillos that he (Bogran) did not know how the Guatemalian people would look upon an intrusion of Guatemala by Honduras troops. President Bogran told Barillos that the people of Guatemala might look upon Honduras' assistance to Guatemalian government in its internal affairs as an unwarranted intervention, or even as a tacit declaration of war against Guatemala. If President Barillos obtained the formal consent of the Guatemalian people to the step, President Bogran should then furnish the required assistance. Barillos is consequently left practically without the assistance of Honduras.

Major Palma, who was denounced as an informer by President Celman, is dead. It is asserted that he was poisoned. The press of Buenos Ayres is completely muzzled.

A ONE-ARMED RACER.

A correspondent at Donald says that one of the most exciting races that has ever taken place there came off on Tuesday, between a one armed man from Montana and Tom Henderson of Donald. The same runners had a try two weeks ago, Henderson winning. The "unknown" thereupon offered to bet $100 to $50 that he could beat Henderson. The bet was taken up, and it is said an attempt was made to buy the one armed goer, but the negotiation fell through when a considerable sum had been put on on the result. The "unknown" defeated his opponent with apparent ease making the quarter mile in

CRICKET.

The match at Esquimalt, Victoria versus the Navy, on Saturday was a pronounced success, not only because Victoria won—for she ought to have won by more than she did—but because the weather was superb, and numbers of ladies graced the ground—a little it must be confessed to their peril—during the afternoon. The land of the Wary spite played, and the officers of the fleet provided the ladies with the feminine delights of tea and [illegible] as their cutters lay at the dock alongside the great ship and at the club. The navy were perhaps somewhat surprised at being beaten, and no wonder for their fielding was wonderfully smart all round, and more runs are saved by fielding than are made by batting. Their bowling was very fast and straight, but perhaps lacked "devil." For R. Aricott and Mr. Aldy were dusty straight and Mr. Vaughan had a fine break, as Mr. Wesley and Hudson bowled fairly for Victoria, and though Victoria's all round fielding was inferior to the navy's, there were some [illegible] Hilary, Aldy, Mr. Martin and Ward. Mr. Fenley made a fine throw in from the boundary, and Mr. Irving took the wicket in very fine style standing back. Mr. Pooley played in his usual invariable form. The scores on both sides were small, but it was the most delightful match in every way, thanks to the hosts, at this season. May it be the first of many, with the Marquise to go the rounds.

EIGHT HOURS A DAY.

APPROPRIATE SERMON PREACHED YESTERDAY MORNING

By the Rt. Rev. Bishop Cridge to the Reformed Episcopal Church—A Large Number of Workingmen Present to Hear the Sermon.

A large number of workingmen and representatives of the unions were present at the Reformed Episcopal church yesterday morning to hear the sermon on the eight hour question which Right Rev. Bishop Cridge preached. Taking for his text Psalm cxxvii. 2: "It is vain for you to rise up early, to sit up late, to eat the bread of sorrows: for so he giveth his beloved sleep." At 9 o'clock 33 deaths passed, the sun blazed down, the rev. gentleman said:

In speaking to you this morning, my brethren and friends on the much agitated question of shorter hours of labor for working men, I would ask you kindly to distinguish what I may say as a matter of personal opinion from what I may deliver on the authority of the Word of God. In the former case I simply contribute my share as one of our Christian citizens to the solution of a difficult question to the best of my judgment and belief, and as such ask the indulgence of such of my hearers as may think differently from myself. I do not hold, indeed, that the Christian minister should give his opinions on matters indiscriminately, for thus he might often be wasting his own time and that of his hearers. But the question before us, I apprehend, is not of this sort. It is one that touches our religion very closely. The first man was a working man; his employer the Lord Himself. As all then do the will of God in honest labor, whether of the head or hands, any strife between head and hands partakes of the nature of a civil war, and is a disruption of the unity of the body, and it surely becomes the duty of a Christian minister, not as an arbitrator, still less as a partisan, to do what in him lies to allay the strife and to restore the unity.

I would observe, then, first, that so far as I understand it, the case involves no question of right. The working men do not say that their liberty has been infringed, or their rights invaded. There is no question of the right of every working man to carry his labor where he pleases, and to make the best of it for himself that he can; or of the right of employers to exercise a similar discretion on their part. No doctrines of socialism will ever be able to alter this right so long as Christian nations enjoy the liberty wherewith Christ hath made them free. As to those who would bring in anarchy, they will never succeed, for the commonsanity is against them. But it does not follow that when we have said this we have said all. I am looking at the case as in populous countries. If no law were binding but that which is written, this were a harder world to live in than it is. But there is an unwritten law, deep in the hearts of men not utterly depraved, which has softened, and is softening beyond all telling the hard conditions of human life; a law whose precepts are rather in the spirit than in the letter, called into more living exercise by the religion which we all profess; a law whose neglect is chargeable with a vast amount of the miseries which afflict mankind; miseries nowhere more conspicuous than in the condition of vast numbers of the working classes. It has been truly observed in a recent utterance on the subject that there is in Christian England at the present time a condition of life as cruel as that of the Roman slave. And this condition does not accrue from unrighteous laws or violation of legal right, but from man taking advantage of their fellow-men. The hungry belly and naked back has put into the hands of men greedy of gain—all the while acting within their legal rights—a whip of scorpions more stinging than the lash of the slave driver, and wielded more mercilessly than was ever done by the hands of Egyptian taskmasters over Israel the oppressed. Thank God the awful problem is engaging the solicitude of all orders of Christian minds actuated by the unwritten law, and when its solution is reached, as we hope and pray it will, the results may be gathered up, and, so far as may be, transferred to the written code. No such extreme case affects us here, further than as affording the opportunity of remarking how the guilt of taking advantage of others' distress may be more widely incurred than we are apt to think. How of us ever consider how often the very garments we have worn were wet with the tears of the overworked, for we all like to buy in the cheapest market, little reeking at what a cost to others our own pockets have been spared. Few of us but would be rich if we could, or that do not wink at the sordid economies which may conduce to our desire.

But to come to the simple issue before us, I must confess that to my own mind there is something very captivating in the idea of the threefold division of our 24 hours' day, one-third for labor, one-third for refreshment and rest, and one-third for improvement and for devotion to social and domestic affections. I feel that it is said that men will not spend aright the time thus gained, and only desire the hours for more free indulgence in vicious excess. It may be so in some cases, but I do not think that the mass of workingmen are thus vicious or that they ever were. Surely the records of vicious excess stand more against the rich than against the poor. We need no more decisive testimony of this, so far as workingmen of our own day are concerned, than the conduct of the masses in the greatest city in the Christian world during the recent agitations. Brutality and drunkenness are the exception more than the rule among workingmen. Besides which they have powerful allies on all in improving their condition. The advancement of learning and the cause of temperance are bringing them more and more into the regions of purer air. Here is the security against the abuse of relaxation of toil. The temptations to idleness, the incentives to crime, will be lessened rather than increased under a less exacting rule. The gaps in the social system will be less conspicuous; the rudeness of manner through absence of culture will be softened. If such relaxation can be achieved, not as by right but by a good mutual understanding between employers and men, society will rejoice and feel the better for it.

There is surely little force in the suggestion that the proposed shortening of hours will so reduce the sum of the products of labor as to materially impoverish society. Eight hours instead of ten, a loss, if universal, which is is not, of one fifth. But look at the overwhelming superfluity of products and the uses they are put to, and where is the loss? Life would not be bereft of one of its charms if that superfluity were reduced I will not say by one-fifth but by one-half. Our superfluities and wanton wastes are a sin and a shame, and are fast bringing us to the condition of the once mistress of the world when culminating in her corruptions to her overthrow. Be sure that the luxurious classes are preparing a rod for their own backs. But with regard to the loss, whatever it may be, it must ultimately come upon society, and society is surely able to bear it.

But it is not reason that I should detain you with reflections of my own as to the probable effects of the proposed relaxation of the toil of the working classes. Let me rather speak of the way in which the present controversy should be carried on, and the spirit in which alone the strife may be composed. I know of no compendious specific to deal suddenly with the labor question with its thousand roots and ramifications entering into the social system everywhere and complicating it inconceivably. There is no warrant for the Christian minister to go about to settle worldly disputes. "Man! who made me a judge or a divider over you?" Nor is there any common principle among men to arbitrate amid conflicting interests and selfish passions, which interests and passions, diverse and irreconcilable, constitute burning questions which courts cannot settle nor human wisdom solve. The business of the ministry is not to determine issues, but to assist in reaching them aright. Some questions are simple and terminable by common justice. It cannot be said here that justice is wholly on the one side or wholly on the other. We cannot say to the opposing sides as the town clerk said to the riotous assembly at Ephesus, "The law is open, and there are deputies; let them implead one another." This question is not so. Both sides have a case, and both sides have a grievance. Both sides are in the wrong, and both sides are in the right. Both sides are to blame, and both sides are to be pitied. Both sides are to be condemned, and both sides are to be commended. Both sides are to be helped, and both sides are to be rebuked. Both sides are to be encouraged, and both sides are to be warned. Both sides are to be exhorted, and both sides are to be comforted. Both sides are to be instructed, and both sides are to be admonished. Both sides are to be reasoned with, and both sides are to be prayed for. Both sides are to be taught, and both sides are to be learned from. Both sides are to be listened to, and both sides are to be spoken to. Both sides are to be understood, and both sides are to be misunderstood. Both sides are to be forgiven, and both sides are to be asked for forgiveness. Both sides are to be loved, and both sides are to be hated. Both sides are to be blessed, and both sides are to be cursed. Both sides are to be saved, and both sides are to be lost. Both sides are to be redeemed, and both sides are to be condemned. Both sides are to be justified, and both sides are to be sanctified. Both sides are to be glorified, and both sides are to be humbled. Both sides are to be exalted, and both sides are to be abased. Both sides are to be crowned, and both sides are to be crucified. Both sides are to be raised, and both sides are to be buried. Both sides are to be born again, and both sides are to die. Both sides are to be born of the Spirit, and both sides are to be born of the flesh. Both sides are to be born of God, and both sides are to be born of the devil. Both sides are to be children of God, and both sides are to be children of the devil. Both sides are to be heirs of God, and both sides are to be heirs of the devil. Both sides are to be joint heirs with Christ, and both sides are to be joint heirs with the devil. Both sides are to be members of the body of Christ, and both sides are to be members of the body of the devil. Both sides are to be temples of the Holy Ghost, and both sides are to be temples of the devil. Both sides are to be filled with the Spirit, and both sides are to be filled with the devil. Both sides are to be led by the Spirit, and both sides are to be led by the devil. Both sides are to be taught by the Spirit, and both sides are to be taught by the devil. Both sides are to be anointed with the Spirit, and both sides are to be anointed with the devil. Both sides are to be sealed with the Spirit, and both sides are to be sealed with the devil. Both sides are to be baptized with the Spirit, and both sides are to be baptized with the devil. Both sides are to be filled with the Spirit, and both sides are to be filled with the devil. Both sides are to be led by the Spirit, and both sides are to be led by the devil. Both sides are to be taught by the Spirit, and both sides are to be taught by the devil. Both sides are to be anointed with the Spirit, and both sides are to be anointed with the devil. Both sides are to be sealed with the Spirit, and both sides are to be sealed with the devil. Both sides are to be baptized with the Spirit, and both sides are to be baptized with the devil.

A BURNING FIERY FURNACE.

The Hottest Day of the Year in New York—How We Fry There.

NEW YORK, July 31.—New York has had a good many hot days this summer, but the one that came to Staten Island with this morning was a scorcher, such as no northern city save New York experienced. It warmed up during the night and refreshing sleep was almost unknown. At daylight the thermometer registered 79 and at 8 o'clock advanced 37 degrees and continued to get hotter. At noon it showed 95 degrees and the thermometer, shielded from the sun registered 91. At 2 o'clock 98 degrees were passed, the sun blazed down with consuming heat and the streets were the appearance of a southern city. Several cases of sunstroke were reported before noon, and some of them will result fatally. The filthy condition of the streets, left from the strike of the street cleaning department, is causing a great deal of sickness on the east side of the city, where the heat is probably felt more than in any part of New York. The effects of the terrible heat are apparent on every hand. Down in the commercial section the business is seriously interfered with.

It is really dangerous for people to venture into the streets where the fierce rays of the sun blister everything. Men who had work out doors, well in the shadows of awnings and buildings could stand it, but ambulances from Bellevue, Chambers street, Governour and other hospitals were dashing all over town, loaded with persons who had been prostrated and conveying them to the hospitals for treatment.

The exact record of the day's casualities is not very easy to secure, because, in addition to the great number of cases cared for at the hospitals, many victims were taken from the streets and sent to their residences in private carriages. At the hospitals the house and ambulance surgeons had their hands full of

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

Samoa Again Disorderly—The Bombardment of Buenos Ayres, &c.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—In a barroom in the King's Lane road, a discharged soldier named Harper, quarreled with two men, and drawing a revolver killed them both. He claimed the men had robbed him. He had just returned from New York, where he had unsuccessfully looked for work. The papers call it an "American tragedy."

It is officially announced that the Prussian Minister of Commerce will concede most of the demands of the miners' delegates recently submitted to the government, including eight hours, reinstatement of all the strikers, arbitration in courts to which mining officials shall be amenable, and abolition of farming jobs.

A Times Buenos Ayres dispatch says: Financial chaos and anarchy rain. The bill postponing payment of bills one month has passed the chamber. Great pressure is applied to compel Celman to resign.

During the insurrection here the ironclad fleet, which joined the revolutionary movement, bombarded the city two days. Serious damage was done to many buildings, especially those in view of the Plaza Victoria. There were 1,000 persons killed and 5,000 wounded.

The steamer Lubeck, from Apia to Sydney, N.S.W., brings rumors of disorder in the Samoan village. In the opinion of Europeans these disorders point out the necessity of the treaty powers, England, Germany and the United States, forming a proper government for Samoa.

It is customary in the British army for the Inspector-General at certain intervals to ask the men on parade if they have any complaints to make. This has been regarded as a mere form, none of the soldiers, no matter how serious their grievance, acting on official query. Now, however, there is a movement on foot among the enlisted men in London, Aldershot and elsewhere to present complaints of long standing abuses, some of which have attracted the attention of even higher members of the service. As yet no available token has been forthcoming that the abuses are likely to be remedied. There are reports that since their alarm over the Grenadier Guards' mutiny, the authorities are contemplating reforms that will obviate more serious causes of complaint.

A Warning.

Mr. Editor,—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look upon a cold in the head as a matter of little importance—involving at the most only a temporary inconvenience. No more disastrous mistake was ever made. The neglected cold in the head is the source of the catarrhal affections with which about seven-tenths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stages to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are [illegible] offensive breath, roaring in the head, headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should lose no time in applying a remedy. Delays are proverbially dangerous, and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a positive cure for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Nasal Balm has been tested in thousands of cases, and the testimonials in our possession prove that it is all we claim for it. It has cured other sufferers, it will cure you. It is easy to use, pleasant and agreeable and does not require a douche, or any irritating instrument to apply it. Give it a trial and be convinced of its great efficacy. IS THE GOVERNMENT ENTITLED TO CONFIDENCE?

Now that the Province has a land policy in correspondence with that of the Opposition it seems to be expected of the TIMES that it should fall on the necks of the Quintette and call them "dalsies." The TIMES, however, without being cold-blooded is not effusive, and if it were, it is scarcely likely that it would find in the tardy reformation of the Quintette an ennobling and soul-stirring subject. The TIMES belongs to the old-fashioned school that teaches that virtue is its own reward, and the TIMES, taking it that the Quintette are happy in their conscious rectitude, would deprecate anything like journalistic gush. There are certain kinds of repentance for which the TIMES would gladly kill the fatted calf, but in this instance it must beg to be excused from holding a barbecue in honor of a coterie who for several years past have seriously compromised their moral insight by never practising virtue except upon the spur of necessity. The TIMES has seriously questioned in its own mind, whether it would have treated the Prodigal Son as royally as did his paternal relative. It has always seemed to the TIMES that the young man going away as he did and returning as he did, should have been put on a vegetable diet. Is it likely, then, that in the case of the Government, which is not dissimilar to that of the young man of Biblical story, the TIMES should feel like celebrating their repentance with a flourish of head lines and a lot of rhetorical gush? The TIMES has no confidence in the Quintette whatever their professions may be, and if to-morrow they should declare themselves converted to the Opposition faith and array themselves behind Messrs. BEAVEN and GRANT, the TIMES would regard it a questionable addition of political strength. The political organization which having everything to gain and nothing to lose by reversing its policy, is not entitled to be classed in the category of reformers. Men of this sort, who in the reform procession are found at the tail of it, have small claim to public confidence.

A few months ago, before the Premier had manufactured that half-hearted policy which was virtually wrung from them by main force, the public, it was impossible to touch him with a ten foot pole. Then, in his estimation, the Opposition were a sickly lot, and all criticism emanating therefrom was factious. He boldly declared that he had the confidence of nine-tenths of the people, and that the Government's land policy was the policy par excellence; the Government in a word, was not selling a foot of land except to bona fide settlers. The result of the Government from its beautiful day-dream of political domination. They discovered themselves, in fact, on the ragged edge of political destruction, and from that day to this the great question has been, how they should flop without seeming to take a complete somersault. Gently has the ground been broken for them. From a ranscorous anti-Henry Georgeist, the Colonist gradually lowered its tone to a hoarse squawk in behalf of the poor devil of the bona fide settler, and now the Gazette announces that all crown lands are withdrawn from sale except in the case of purchasers who desire to settle down and grow up with the country. Now what does all this mean, or rather what does it prove. It proves that the Government's land policy is or was just what the Opposition charged it of being—a bogus game. Had the Government's land policy been the policy par excellence, shall we suppose that the Government would have abandoned it? And does not the fact that the language of the Gazette plainly states that none but bona fide settlers need apply give the lie to the Government's defence in the past of their land policy? But the purpose of the TIMES is not to deal with matters of common history. There is no need to resurrect the Government's record; the public already is familiar with it. What the TIMES wishes to call attention to is this: It has no use for and no confidence in the Government in whatsoever guise they may see fit to masquerade. The more the Government is studied, the more certain it appears that they linger not only superfluous but dangerous on the scene. Uriah Heap was thrown in the shade when the Government sat by and permitted Mr. HASLAM to legislate imperfectly in the matter of the employment of Chinese underground in coal mines, and then subsequently posing as the friends of labor. Does the Government suppose that guilty of such gross hypocrisy they can retain the full confidence of the public? Does the Government suppose that the reversal of their land policy will atone for such contemptible trickery, a species of trickery which in business circles would result in their being black-listed? The TIMES holds that the Government has forfeited the confidence of the public by resorting to and by blindly refusing to take note of a trick which would disgrace a common shyster at law. The TIMES does not propose to be humbugged by such a Government, nor does it propose that the public shall. As CATO stood toward Carthage so does the TIMES stand toward the Government. Punic faith is not the faith for this organ. Acknowledge the deeds, the good as well as the bad, of the Government the TIMES must, but the confidence of the TIMES the Government can never have. They have got to go. They have masqueraded long enough as honest men. The TIMES would not support the Government under any circumstance, and least of all will it slobber over them for promulgating a policy which was virtually wrung from them by main force.

THE CLERGY AND THE LABOR PROBLEM.

The Rev. Mr. BEANLANDS preached an excellent sermon on the eight hour question yesterday, but the general tone of it was pessimistic. The reverend gentleman did not say so, but he is evidently strongly prepossessed of the belief, that the devil is always finding something for idle hands to do, and that consequently should the hours of labor be shortened he would make himself actively felt among the working classes. We have never been able to understand why the devil should concern himself more actively with idle working men than with idle rich men. It seems to us that all classes of humanity are equally susceptible of his influence, and hence that any argument against shorter hours of labor based on the assumption that excess of mischief is likely to eventuate, is not well taken. The fact of the day being divisible into three equal parts is strikingly suggestive that the normal law of things is eight hours for labor, eight hours for recreation and eight hours for sleep. Most men are agreed that eight hours of honest labor are enough. But whether it is or no, this much is staring society square in the face: under the ten hour system there is not work enough to go round. Now there is no way to obviate this condition of affairs except by emigration or by shortening the hours of labor. Which alternative will society take, or, declining to have to do with either, will it place an embargo on the introduction of further labor saving inventions? The clergy experience some diffidence in dealing with this question of labor. It is scarcely in their line, they argue. In this we think they are mistaken. The question is essentially a moral one. Is it really conducive to moral tone that intellectual development should be dwarfed in the interest of material development? But this is a matter the solution of which cannot be reached at one jump. It must be approached by degrees, labor and capital adjusting their differences with due regard for mutual interests.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The only possible benefit that a second line of rails on Government street can confer upon the citizens would be a necessary change in the hack stand. Of two evils, a long suffering public generally chooses the least, although it will occur to many to enquire why even the lesser evil should be tolerated. If a thing is bad it should be put away. The tramway is an excellent thing—so are the cabs—but after all both are private speculative enterprises, which have no more right to monopolize the highway, to the exclusion of the public, than have the butchers to hang, draw and quarter a carcass of beef or mutton on the crowded sidewalks of a metropolitan city.

"The land laws, important as they are," says the News, "are but one item in the long list of reforms necessary of accomplishment before we can hope to induce immigration, attract capital and make the most of our abundant natural resources. Is the News' appetite for reform insatiable? Does the News expect the Government to reverse its whole policy, and thus stultify themselves, giving the lie to their assumption of virtue. It would be amusing to see the Government go back on their former pretensions, and that they will not do so that they may retain their grip on the flesh pots goes without saying. When, however, the News says that in pressing for reform with respect to these matters, it had no support until recently from a single provincial contemporary, it misstates the case. The TIMES has been in existence some little time longer than the News, and has preached reform until the subject has become threadbare. But it is all right. The News at last has set its face against the quasi reformers at James Bay. But what we require of the News is, that however plastic the Government may be in the future it will not be content, but will insist that the whole gang must go. There is in fact no other logical course for the News to pursue.

The annual return of the foreign trade of the Empire of Japan, published by the Bureau of Customs, shows that in 1889 Canada imported from Japan goods to the value of $826,981 and exported to the value of $209,970. The principal items of export were musical instruments, butter, cheese, flour, chemicals and lumber. While it is impossible to form any estimate of the rate at which our trade with Japan is increasing as in our trade and navigation returns Japan and China are bracketted together, at the customs department it is learned that there is the best reason for believing a steady increase is taking place. Canadian manufacturers are just beginning to realize the immense possibilities of trade with Japan.

Was Mr. DEWDNEY among us? He was. Did the boys banquet him? They did not. Why did not the boys bring him to table where there could be feast of reason and flow of pro-Chinese oratory? We give it up. Mr. DEWDNEY came to us and departed and not a toady stirred. Is Mr. DEWDNEY a less refulgent light than he was a year ago? Is his doctrine of Chinese cheap labor less pregnant with the development of Victoria's latent resources than when last year he ventilated it across Delmonico's mahogany? It appears but too true that the boys were afraid of him. DEWDNEY! DEWDNEY! how hast thou fallen! No free grub this time, no free champagne. Thou weniest away dry, dry as a bone. The Board of Trade, somehow, gavest thee the cold, cold shoulder.

The superintendent of insurance has published his usual report upon the insurance business done in Canada for the last year. There are 34 companies now doing business in the Dominion, seven Canadian, 21 British and six American. The cash premiums received during the last year by the fire companies in Canada amounted to $5,588,016, exceeding those of the preceding year by $150,235. The total sum paid out for losses was $2,838,211, or $197,611 less than in 1888. Thus last year was a good one for Canadian insurance men, while the aggregate sum received for premiums increased the losses fell off. The losses only amounted to 51 per cent. of the premiums received. The percentage of losses of the Canadian companies received was 57 per cent., the British companies 49 and the American companies 51 per cent. Twelve Canadian, nine British and ten American companies take life risks in Canada. The total risks taken during 1889 reached $44,572,937, exceeding those of the preceding year by $3,340,408. The Canadian companies show a gain in 1889 of $1,562,698, while in 1888 they gained $1,320,710. The American companies have a gain of $2,354,782, while in 1888 they gained 6928,762, and the British companies have a decrease of $586,484, whilst in 1888 they had a decrease of 4018,748, the total increase in 1889 being $3,320,408 as above stated.

NOT TOBACCO SMOKE.

What a Newspaper Reporter Says About Cigarettes.

A correspondent to an eastern paper asks the editor what kind of tobacco cigarettes are made of, and what the effect of smoking fifty a week would be. To this the editor replied:

"There is but little evidence that cigarettes are made of tobacco. They don't look like tobacco, don't taste like it and certainly don't smell like it. Tobacco smoke has a pleasant odor, but if there is anything on earth or in the waters under the earth that has a more disagreeable, nauseating, noisome disgusting, loathsome, pernicious and nasty smell than cigarette smoke it has not been discovered. The 'ancient and fish-like smell' that Shakespeare speaks of in 'The Tempest' is an odor of Araby the Blest as compared with cigarette smoke. The nauseous contents of the 'tainted nostrils.' We hope for the sake of the cigarette smoker that his offense does not 'smell to heaven,' for should the recording angel ever get a whiff of that particularly unheavenly smell he could never afterwards be pure, and no amount of repentance on the part of the smoker could ever blot out that black page in his record. It is said that bedbugs will not bite a cigarette smoker. This shows that even a bedbug has some self-respect, and is not so depraved an insect as some people think. What are the materials used for the manufacture of cigarettes? We give it up. The imaginative is disposed to see in cancerous, and the stomach becomes unsettled when the mind grapples with this problem. We do not wish to say harsh things of glue factories, bone yards, Bridgport odors and Limburger cheese, nor have we any desire to abuse a dead mackerel or a back number egg, but one can't help suspecting that cigarette makers use these things to give tone and flavor to the fruit of their factories. What injury are they to a person who smokes fifty a week? They corrode the morals, degrade the senses, debase the intellect. If a cigarette smoker can be said to have an intellect—and hurt the constitution, the digestion, the nerve centres. If you smoke fifty a week, or even fifty a year, reform. If you can't stop voluntarily go to the Washingtonian home or have yourself sent to Joliet. Even suicide may be excusable if every other reformatory effort fails."

TEACHERS' CERTIFICATES.

To the Editor:—A few years ago certificates of the moral character of candidates for teachers signed by J. N. Muir were accepted by two at least of the present board of examiners, and now it seems that the certificate of the pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church of this city for J. N. Muir does not satisfy this board.

Of course if the opinion of this board amounts to anything a slur would be cast on the whole congregation, the Hon. John Robson included; but as there seems to be no reasonable doubt that it was politics that caused the board to refuse Mr. Muir his certificate, then the pastor and the congregation need not feel hurt. However, the whole people of the Province must feel the disgrace if politics has influenced the board of examiners of teachers.

Why was J. N. Muir's certificate cancelled last December? As S. D. Pope has put on record three very different reasons, I take this reason from the sessional papers as given on oath by the Hon. John Robson: "That if had come to such a pass that either Mr. Muir's certificate would have to be cancelled or he (Pope) would have to resign his position. I then yielded, etc." Now might it not happen that if J. N. Muir got his certificate then S. D. Pope would resign, and where could the Government get another person (male or female) that would do in place of Mr. Pope? Can any reasonable person doubt that the board of examiners went outside of the testimonials, and from political motives pure and simple unanimously refused J. N. Muir his certifi-

THE ATHLETIC CLUB'S BLUNDER.

To the Editor.—The esteem of the community was very freely accorded to your article of Saturday condemning the city council for allowing the Athletic Club building to be erected at the foot of Menzies street, and for your calling upon our city fathers to correct their mistake and to remove the objectionable structure. You have the distinction of being the leader of the public press in protecting citizens' rights in this matter. The legal proceedings now being instituted by a private citizen would of themselves have caused the removal of the club building, but the very pronounced public opinion now existing may result in effecting the building's removal by amicable arrangement between the municipal council and members of the club.

Such would be the best solution of the difficulty, as it would certainly be a serious reflection on the city council if a private citizen is allowed to continue to seek the aid of the law courts to protect public property against the results of their carelessness.

Your contemporary yesterday, in reviewing what is termed "This Municipal Blunder," suggests the remedy that the city council pay the club the cost of the removal of their building, and this seems fair, as the Athletic Club were led into a false position by the good-natured negligence of our city fathers.

The loss to the city need not be much, for the piles and covering could be utilized for the suggested public landing—ultimate good will arise out of the present difficulty. Municipal councillors and citizens alike are made conversant with the valuable waterfront lots held by them for the purposes of public landings and esplanade, and will doubtless shortly beautify the city by their formation. Citizen.

INTERIOR ITEMS.

Mining Matters and News Notes From the Inland Press.

From the Miner.]

A mile and a half south of the Skyline, in the Hot Springs district, and adjoined to be on the same ledge, is the Fourth. The location was made by Earnest & Watson on the 4th of July this year. The ledge is reported to be 12 feet wide and mineralized throughout, the ore being carbonates and galena. The result of two assays was $78 and $292.50 a ton. The owners think they have a good showing for a valuable property.

The machinery for the Davies & Tolling last Sunday morning. Next Tuesday the mill will be cutting lumber. Pretty quick work, as every pound of the plant had to be packed on mules from the landing to the mill site.

In making a rock cut on the railway grade, about ten miles west of Nelson, a two-foot vein of fine looking ore was discovered. It is said to carry a good percentage of copper, and to look not unlike the ore from Toad Mountain. The ledge was located by W. H. Henderson.

The heat was so intense this week Wilson's refrigerator to keep it from melting.

Nelson people are luxuriating on ripe red raspberries from neighboring foothills, raw radishes, potatoes and turnips from our market gardens, and fresh green peas (in tin cans) from California.

The Galena, on Thursday's trip, brought in 13 tons of merchandise for local merchants, besides the regular complement of outsiders looking for solid investments in good mines and some unreal estate.

Episcopalian services were held in Nelson on Sunday, conducted by Bishop Sillitoe, who, accompanied by Mrs. Sillitoe, is making his pastoral tour. At the morning service the first baptism in Nelson took place, the hope and heir of the Ellis family being christened George Ralph Nelson. The collection in the morning was $4.35, in the evening $5.16. Mr. and Mrs. Sillitoe, after visiting Hot Springs and Hendryx, left Nelson for Sproat, en route to Caribou on Friday morning.

The bridge across Ward creek at Baker street is now completed. It is 20 feet wide and 145 feet long, and only lacks a coat of red paint to make it a distinguished mark in an unpainted town.

Mr. and Mrs. George Harmon of Ainsworth are to be congratulated. They are the parents of a daughter, the first white child born in the Kootenay Lake country. The event took place on Monday last week, weight, thirteen pounds. The boys of the camp, simply to encourage other young married couples, chipped in and presented the baby with a purse containing $30.

The boys who squandered their wealth in drinking "hot Scotches" last winter, wish that they had saved enough to purchase an occasional lemonade or mint julep, now that they are compelled to work on railroad cuts and wagon grades with the mercury at 90 in the shade.

A raft containing 50,000 feet of lumber was brought to Nelson on Thursday from Buchanan's mill. The rough lumber is sold at the landing for $20 a thousand, the dressed at $27.

J. C. Eykert, jr., of the customs house at the boundary line, began cutting hay this week. He will put in about 100 tons, finding a market for it at Ainsworth, Nelson and the railroad camps.

It is reported that a brickyard will be started at Nelson in August. A party now at Medicine Hat will undertake the enterprise.

From the Kootenay Star.]

Since pay last week, a number of men from Keefer & Co's camp have left for parts unknown, mostly going across the border. The Chinamen also are scattering. What the grievance is we have not heard, but it must be something serious if the Celestials take offence at it.

Wm. Clemson, of the Booth Mining Co., of French Creek, came in last week and went on to his home in Portland, Oregon. Work on the shaft is suspended for the present on account of water. Mr. Booth remains at the creek prospecting.

Wilson & Co's pack train got in from Big Bend yesterday evening. Ten days ago the Last Chance tunnel was in 850 feet. They are still taking out good pay at Smith Creek.

Steel rails sufficient for 21 miles of track have been shipped to Sproat, about 2,500 tons, and 60 car-loads, say 1,000 tons more, is yet to go.

From the Sentinel.]

Four men arrived in town from the Kootenay country on Friday. They state that they worked on the C. & K. railway for five weeks, at the end of which time they went to settle up with their contractor. To their astonishment they found they were in debt, owing to the exhorbitant prices charged them for board, doctor's bills, and boat fare. They "beat" their way here.

Currants and raspberry bushes are loaded down with fruit. Wild berries of all descriptions are plentiful.

As yet very few of the farmers have commenced to hay on a large scale, they are all waiting for a change in the weather, it still being cloudy and threatening. Taken all over the wild hay meadows will yield large crops. The timothy and grain crops will also be good this year.

Mr. John Wilson, the veteran cattle man of B.C., was up last week through the lake La Hache and Dog creek sections buying cattle. He made some large purchases on the trip.

We have had an unusually wet summer, says the Clinton correspondent. The "oldest inhabitants" can only remember one or two seasons that have equalled it. In consequence the hills and valleys are covered with a luxuriant growth of grass, and the sleek and health looking cattle are putting on extra fat to withstand the cold and fasts of winter.

In the estimates sent down to the Local House, an appropriation of some $1,500 was made to be devoted to building a much needed addition to the Kamloops Public Schools, but nothing in the shape of building has yet been done. Good time has been lost, and it behooves the department to have this little matter attended to at once.

It is rumored that the Lamley Bros. have been made several offers for the Enderby townsite by speculators, one company, it is said offering to pay $500 an acre for the site.

A meeting was held in the Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening to ascertain if the congregation was prepared to move in a call to a minister. The meeting was not very well attended and was adjourned to Sunday night at the conclusion of the regular services.

The jail is being lathed and will be plastered throughout the main building and kitchen.

Mr. Chas. Semlin, M.P.P., is in town, attending the agricultural meet.

BEHRING SEA QUESTION.

In conversation with a Globe reporter, Mr. Staveley Hill commented upon the correspondence on the Behring Sea negotiations.

"As to the question of Behring Sea being a mare clausum," he said, "it is hardly necessary to say that no sea is considered a landlocked sea which is too wide to be dominated from the land, that is from both sides. Between the westernmost Aleutian island and the coast of Kamschatka this sea is 120 miles wide. The other islands in the group give a space, as I make out from my map, of about 45 miles, so it is contrary to all international law that it should be called a closed sea. The argument of President Harrison in 1822 is to this effect in the American case against Russia, and it has never been answered and stands unanswerable. It was accepted by Russia, the other party to the dispute at that time. When Mr. Blaine says the killing of seal is contra bonos mores, he invents an entirely

NEW INTERNATIONAL CRIME.

The American claim is such a shabby one that it is very difficult to state the argument in support of it. I have looked it over in every shape. I say, as a lawyer, it is impossible to see any argument in it. The fact is Mr. Blaine has been urged on by the American Commercial Company to take ground which is absolutely indefensible. When Lord Salisbury says, as he does, that Canada must be consulted before anything is done, he takes ground which every British statesman ought strongly to claim and entirely to rely upon. And in the answer put forward by Mr. Blaine that in a question involving the rights of the United States he would not be heard to say that California ought to be consulted, he entirely overlooks the fact that Canada and Canada alone is the part of the British Empire which would suffer by the British Government assenting to his proposition.

"As to the claim put forward," Mr. Hill went on, "that the present state of things involves the destruction of the fur bearing seal, I have made the closest investigation into the matter by inquiry of reliable persons engaged in the trade, and I have no doubt that the number of seals now resorting to the Pribyloff Islands and to be found in the Behring Sea is greater than it was twenty years ago when the lease to the Alaskan Company began. I have also quite satisfied myself that the mode adopted of spearing by Indians as suggested by Mr. Blaine, but that only a very small proportion of the seals struck by the spear of the Indian sealer or the bullets of the white sealer escape from being brought to the schooner. I spoke to every sealer I could find in October last and fortified myself with close inquiry of persons engaged in the trade at Victoria, and believing them to be trustworthy persons, I base my opinions upon their statements. I never came across a more trustworthy set of men than the Victoria sealers, and my position in the navy" (Mr. Hill is counsel for the admiralty) "gives me very considerable opportunities of judging.

"As to the destruction of the seal, if we are destroying them, the matter ought to be considered by the Governments of Britain, America, Russian and Japan, the only four nations interested now. Whatever agreement is come to must be accepted by all the civilized nations, otherwise a sealer could evade it by simply flying the flag of some nation outside the agreement."

Alaskan Summer Route

Is becoming a very fashionable one tourists, and at present on our thoroughfares are noticeable in large numbers those waiting for the Queen going north. Not less observable is it to passers by the quantity of furniture and carpets that daily leaves the store of Hastie & Erskine, 62 Government street which is altogether owing to the fashionable stock carried and good value given by them.

DESERTER

By Capt. Charles King, U.S.A.

And even as she spoke, and as he was pulling on an overcoat, the train rumbled off again. Then came an exclamation, this time from the younger:

"Why, Kate! Look! see all those men—and horses! Why, they are soldiers—cavalry! Oh, how I love to see them again! But, oh, how cold they look—frozen!"

"Who can they be?" said Mrs. Rayner, all vehement interest now, and gazing eagerly from the window at the lowered heads of the horses and the muffled figures in blue and fur. "What can they be doing in the field in such awful weather? I cannot recognize one of them, or tell officers from men. Surely that must be Capt. Wayne—and Maj. Stannard. Oh, what can it mean?"

The young man had suddenly leaped to the window behind them, and was gazing out with an eagerness and interest little less apparent than her own; but in a moment the train had whisked them out of sight of the storm beaten troopers. Then he hurried to the rear window of the car, and Mrs. Rayner as hastily followed.

"Do you know them?" she asked.

"Yes. That was Maj. Stannard. It is his battalion of the —th cavalry, and they have been out scouting after renegade Cheyennes. Pardon me, madame, I must go forward and see who have boarded the train."

He stopped at his section, and again she followed him. Her eyes full of anxiety. He was busy tugging at a flask in his traveling bag.

"You know them! Do you know—have you heard of any infantry being out? Pardon me for detaining you, but I am very anxious. My husband is Capt. Rayner, of Fort Warrener."

"No infantry have been sent, madame, I—have reason to know; at least, none from Warrener."

And with that he hurriedly bowed and left her. The next moment, flask in hand, he was crossing the storm swept platform and making his way to the head of the train.

"I believe he is an officer," said Mrs. Rayner to her sister. "Who else would be apt to know about the movement of the troops? Did you notice how gentle his manner was?—and he never smiled. He has such a sad face. Yet he can't be an officer, or he would have made himself known to us long ago."

"Is there no name on the satchel?" asked Miss Travers, with pardonable curiosity. "He has an interesting face—not handsome." And a dreamy look came into her deep eyes. She was thinking, no doubt, of a dark, oval, distingue face with raven hair and mustache. The youth in the travelling suit was not tall, like Steven—not singularly, romantically handsome, like Steven. Indeed, he was of less interest to her than to her married sister.

Mrs. Rayner could see no name on the satchel, only two initials; and they revealed very little.

"I have half a mind to peep at the fly leaf of that book," she said. "He walked just like a soldier; but there isn't anything there to indicate what he is," she continued, with a doubtful glance at the items scattered about the now vacant section. "Why isn't that porter here? He ought to know who people are."

As though to answer her request, in came the porter, disheveled and breathless. He made straight for the satchel they had been scrutinizing, and opened it without ceremony. Both ladies regarded this proceeding with natural astonishment, and Mrs. Rayner was about to interfere and question his right to search the luggage of passengers, when the man turned hurriedly towards them, exhibiting a little bundle of handkerchiefs, his broad Ethiopian face clouded with anxiety and concern:

"The gentleman told me to take all his handkerchiefs. We've got a dozen frozen soldiers in the baggage car—some of 'em mighty bad—and they're tryin' to make 'em comfortable until they get to the fort."

"Soldiers frozen! Why do you take them in the baggage car!—such a barn here. Why not in the cars, where it is warm, where we could make them warm and care for them!" exclaimed Mrs. Rayner, in impulsive indignation.

"Laws, ma'am! never do in the world to bring frozen people into a hot car! Sure to make their ears an' noses drop off, that would! Got to keep 'em in the cold and pile snow around 'em. That gentleman sittin' here—he knows," he continued: "he's an officer, and him and the doctor's workin' with 'em now."

And Mrs. Rayner, vanquished by a statement of facts well known to her yet forgotten in the first impetuosity of her indignation, relapsed into the silence of temporary defeat.

"He is an officer, then," said Miss Travers, presently. "I wonder what he belongs to."

"Not to our regiment, I'm sure. Probably to the cavalry. He knew Maj. Stannard and other officers whom we passed there."

"Did he speak to them?"

"No; there was no time. We were beyond hearing distance when he ran to the back door of the car; and there was no time before that. But it's very odd!"

"What's very odd?"

"Why, his conduct. It is so strange that he has not made himself known to us, if he's an officer."

"Probably he doesn't know you—or we—are connected with the army, Kate."

"Oh, yes, he does. The porter knows perfectly well, and I told him just before he left."

"Yes, but he didn't know before that time, did he?"

"He ought to have known," said Mrs. Rayner, uncompromisingly. "At least, he should if he had taken the faintest interest. I mentioned Capt. Rayner so that he could not help hearing.

This statement being one that Miss Travers could in no wise contradict—as it was one, indeed, that Mrs. Rayner could have dispensed with as unnecessary—the younger lady again betook herself to silence and pulling the kitten's ears.

"Even if he didn't know before," continued her sister, after a pause in which she had apparently been brooding over the indifference of the young man in question, "he ought to have made himself known after I told him who I was." Another pause. "That's what I did it for," she wound up, conclusively.

"And that's what I thought," said Miss Travers, with a quiet smile. "However, he had no time then; he was hurrying off to see whether any of the soldiers had come on board. He took his flask with him, and apparently was in haste to offer some one a drink. I'm sure that is what papa used to do," she added, as she saw a frown gathering on her sister's face.

"What papa did just after the war—a time when everybody drank—if not at all the proper thing now. Capt. Rayner never touches it, and I don't allow it in the house."

"Still I should think it a very useful article when a lot of frozen and exhausted men are on one's hands," said Miss Travers. "That was but a small flask he had and I'm sure they'll need more."

There came a rush of cold air from the front, and the swinging door blew open ahead of the porter, who was heard banging shut the outer portal. Then he hurried in.

"Can some of you gentlemen oblige me with some whisky or brandy?" he asked. "We've got some frozen soldiers aboard. Two of 'em are pretty nearly gone."

Two of the card players dropped their hands and started for their section at once. Before they could rummage in their bags for the required article Mrs. Rayner's voice was heard: "Take this, porter." And she held forth a little silver flask. "I have more in my trunk if it is needed," she added, while a blush mounted to her forehead as she saw the quizzical smile on her sister's face. "You know I always carry it in traveling, Nellie—in case of accident or illness, and I'm most thankful I have it now."

"Ever so much obliged, ma'am," said the porter. "But this would be only a thimbleful and I can get a quart bottle of this gentleman."

"Where are they?" said the person thus referred to, as he came down the aisle with a big brown bottle in his hand. "Come, Jim, let's go and see what we can do. One of you gentlemen take my place in the game," he continued, indicating the commercial gents, two of whom, nothing loth, dropped into the vacated seats, while the others pushed on to the front of the train. The porter hesitated one moment.

"Yes, take my flask; I shouldn't feel satisfied without doing something. And please say to the officer that I'm Mrs. Rayner—Mrs. Capt. Rayner, of the infantry—and ask if there isn't something I can do to help."

"Yes, ma'am; I will, ma'am. Oh, he knows who you are; I done told him last night. He's goin' to Fort Warrener, too." And, touching his cap, away went the porter.

"There! He did know all along," said Mrs. Rayner triumphantly. "It is most extraordinary."

"Well, is it the proper thing for people in the army to introduce themselves when traveling? How are they to know it will be agreeable?"

"Agreeable! Why, Nellie, it's always done, especially when ladies are traveling without an escort, as we are. The commonest civility should prompt it, and officers always know their duty to the person who sends their card away, as we are on the train. I don't understand this one at all, especially"— But here she broke off abruptly.

"Especially what?" asked Miss Nell, with an inspiration of maidenly curiosity.

"Especially nothing. Never mind now." And here the baby began to fidget, and stir about, and stretch forth his chubby hands, and thrust his knuckles in his eyes, and pucker up his face in alarming contortions preparatory to a wail, and after one or two soothing and tentative "shushes" from the maternal lips the matron abandoned the attempt, to induce a second nap, and picked him up in her arms, where he presently began to take gracious notice of his pretty aunt and the kitten.

Two hours later, just as the porter had notified them that Warrener Station would be in sight in five minutes, the young man of the opposite section returned to the car. He looked tired, very anxious, and his face was paler and the sad expression more pronounced than before. The train conductor stopped him to speak of some telegrams that had been sent, and both ladies noted the respect which the railway official threw into the tone in which he spoke. The card players stopped their game and went up to ask after the frozen men. It was not until the whistle was sounding for the station that he stood before them and with a grave and courteous bow held forth Mrs. Rayner's silver flask.

"It was a blessing to one poor fellow at least, and I thank you for it, madam," he said.

"I have been so anxious. I wanted to do something. Did you not get my message, Mr.——?" she asked, with intentional pause that he might supply the missing name.

"Indeed there was nothing we could ask of you," he answered, totally ignoring the evident invitation. "I am greatly obliged to you for your kindness, but we had abundant help, and you really could not have reached the car in the face of this gale. Good morning, ma'am. And with that he raised his fur traveling cap and quickly turned to his section and busied himself strapping up his various belongings.

"The man must be a woman hater," she whispered to Miss Travers. "He's going to get out here, too. Who can he be?"

There was still a moment before the train would stop at the platform, and she was not to be beaten so easily. Bending partly across the aisle she spoke again:

"You have been so kind to those poor fellows that I feel sure you must be of the army. I think I told you I am Mrs. Rayner, of Fort Warrener. May we not hope to see you there?"

A deep flush rose to his forehead, suffusing his cheeks, and passed as quickly away. His mouth twitched and trembled. Gazing at him in surprise and trouble, Nellie Travers saw that his face was full of pain, and was turning white again. He half choked before he could reply; he spoke low and yet distinctly, and the words were full of sadness:

"It—it is not probable that we shall meet at all."

And with that he turned away.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

CITY CHICKEN RANCHES.

Even the very best chicken ranches in the centre of a city are not at all conducive to the health of citizens, no matter how healthful the climate may be. But when it comes down to having dirty chicken pens on the sidewalk of the principal street, that street is necessarily avoided by those who are at all particular about what they smell or see. People may not notice it, but if they take a walk down Government street, between Cormorant and Fisguard, they will see that this is the case on the principal street of Victoria. Here, a street on which men have to pass on their way to and from work, is to be seen one of the filthiest sights conceivable. A number of small boxes packed with chickens, which have in fact not enough room to move around, and the consequence is that after a few warm days the smell that arises from the boxes is enough to knock a person down, although the Chinamen seem to enjoy standing over the boxes breathing air that a white man would prefer walking through with a suit of iron armor on. Besides the chickens, there are a number of ducks waddling around in small puddles, that are as bad, if not worse that the chicken pens. Reference was made a few days ago to the fact that the sanitary officer gave too much of his attention to Chinatown, and left the white portion of the population to do as they pleased. This can scarcely be a fact, or he would compel the Mongolians to at least remove their chicken ranches a little way out of the city.

PURCHASING MINES.

The Once Famous No. 1 Brings $15,000—Work to be Resumed.

The Kootenay Miner says Mr. Boyle and Mr. Campbell, representing the Revelstoke smelter, have purchased the whole of No. 1, the whole of the United, two-thirds of the Great Eastern, and one-half of the Jesse R.

The No. 1 is about 3½ miles west of Ainsworth, and is the property opened up by G. B. Wright, he having bonded it in 1888. For some reason the bond was allowed to lapse, but not until $25,000 worth of ore was shipped from the mine—although fully that much money had been expended in development work. A tunnel nearly 400 feet in length was run, which should have tapped the ledge at a depth of 150 feet. An incline shaft, all the way in ore, is down 175 feet, and another, not in ore, is down about 100 feet. Three or four shafts, from 40 to 60 feet in depth, and all in ore, were also sunk. On the property are all the buildings necessary for its development—good buildings at that. After the lapse of the bond—about a year ago—the original owners, N. Velnoweble and John Duncan, resumed operations and shipped some $2000 worth of ore. There is now on the dump fully forty tons of ore that will run over $100 to the ton, and between 500 and 600 tons that will go from $40 to $60 per ton. The purchasers paid $15,000 spot cash for the property.

The United is a great showing for a mine, although but little work has been done on it. The ledge has been uncovered for a distance of 75 feet, showing a vein of almost solid galena about eight feet in width. The price paid is said to be $7500 cash.

Work will be commenced at once on the No. 1, under the superintendence John Thompson.

TALE OF A GRIP.

How It Was Filched, Sold and Found Again Intact.

In Saturday's TIMES was an advertisement detailing the fact that a small brown grip or valise had been lost. Information was also given to the police, and inquiry was made by them with the result that the missing article was found at a pawn shop where it had been sold by Jewell Simpson, a man who had lately given away to the habit of drink. He received a dollar for the grip, which dollar he immediately spent in bad whiskey. Had he taken the article back to its owner, a better reward would have been paid, and Simpson would not be charged with the theft of the valise.

The police, finding out who sold the article, arrested Simpson, and he was charged with the theft in the police court this morning. Mr. F. Barnard, M. P., gave evidence that the valise belonged to Mr. Julian Ralph, correspondent for Harpers' Weekly, who had gone to Frisco by the steamer. The [illegible] and Mr. Barnard, [illegible] together at the club, and the grip had been left there. When they returned it was gone. The prisoner had nothing to say and was remanded until to-morrow. Simpson has never had the reputation of being a thief, but it is probable his love of liquor got the better of him. Had he opened the grip he would have found a flask of the best brandy, without which a newspaper correspondent's outfit would be incomplete. The grip and its contents will be forwarded to Mr. Ralph.

Carried a Wounded Man 30 Days.

While Mr. M. Manson and his brother Wm. Manson were engaged in the woods up north says the Free Press, they were accompanied by a Siwash Indian as guide. They had only taken provisions for five days at which time they believed they would return. When they had penetrated the woods about eighty miles the siwash met with an accident by severely burning his leg, so that he was unable to walk. The two brothers then proceeded to carry him and as the brush was very thick the progress was slow. The next difficulty they had to contend with was the shortness of provisions, and as the homeward journey occupied thirty days all they had to exist upon was half a biscuit a day. When they arrived at the camp they were completely exhausted. The two men are to be commended for their samaritan act which proved so difficult an undertaking.

A New Crime.

At a petty sessions in County Cork lately a man was brought before a resident magistrate for being drunk and disorderly. Asked how the man was disorderly, the constable replied that he was driving a donkey cart and abusing the animal by calling it "Balfour." —(Laughter.) This amusing little incident denoted the high-water mark of the right hon. gentleman's policy.—Mr. Dillon in the House of Commons.

Nelson's Needs.

A physician, a dentist, a watchmaker and jeweler, a sign painter, a baker, a photographer, a druggist, a tinsmith, a wharf, mails three times a week, 1000 surveyed lots, sidewalks in front of lots owned by non-residents, part of the $6000 realized by the government from the sale of 32 lots expended in making the streets passable; daily steamboat communication with Hot Springs camp, and 9 more children of school age.

Pumice Stone Find.

Some very good specimens of pumice stone have been found on section 87 on the eastern side of Salt Spring Island by Mr. Robert Thomas, a rancher there. The stone is of an excellent quality and equal to the Italian kind. Mr. Thomas has presented several fine samples to the Provincial Museum, as also some specimens of lead ore found in the same locality. Mr. Thomas says he is certain that the crater from which the lava has been thrown is not far distant from the place where the stone has been found, as it shows no traces of attrition.

Wreck of the Etta White.

On Friday morning while the steamer Etta White was leaving Bucaneer Bay with a scow in tow for Victoria, says the News-Advertiser, she struck on a ledge of rock and remained fast. As the tide was falling she sunk by the stern and began to fill aft. Everything was done to keep her afloat, but in spite of all the water gained and in about one and a half hours from the time she struck she keeled over and sank, part of her funnel and mast remaining above water. About one hour later she slid off the rocks and disappeared in about 10 fathoms of water.

Water the Park.

On Saturday evening the city water cart was sent out to the park to sprinkle the roads. This was very good of the City Fathers to think of the eyes of the citizens, but then it hardly protected them as the roads were as dry as ever by 3 o'clock, the time that the park is generally crowded. It would hardly hurt the morals of the driver of the water sprinkler to go out to the park early Sunday morning and it would certainly save a good many ones words from those whose eyes and clothes are so thoroughly filled with dust that it takes a few hours brushing and scrubbing to get it out.

Three Baby Panthers.

F. P. Gouge, Geo. Fletcher and W. Braden, while fishing about 3½ miles up the Sooke river yesterday afternoon, came across a large female panther with a litter of young ones. She immediately made for the brush pursued by one of the party, while the others put for camp with the three young panthers, which they brought to town with them this morning, and will show them to their friends at the Athletic Club tomorrow night. Panthers are thick in that district, and in fact in many parts of the island. It is a pity that the party could not get a get a shot at the old panther, but she was too quick for them. However, the three captured will be so many less to menace the farmers.

Rough on Victoria Shippers.

The TIMES a few days ago complimented Victoria shippers (Simon Leiser and others) for their enterprise in sending goods into Kootenay, and this is the way the Kootenay Miner "jumps upon" our shippers:

"The enterprise of the 'local shippers,' indeed! The 'local shippers' of Victoria have done but little towards aiding the pioneer merchants and mining men of the Kootenay Lake country to obtain any facilities whatever. If the 'local shippers' of Victoria, one of whom is a member of the Provincial Government, had foresight, the trade of this section would not now be going to Spokane Falls. Did the 'local shippers' of Victoria use their influence, or any pressure whatever, to compel the government to build a wagon road from the navigable waters of the Columbia to the navigable waters of Kootenay lake? On the contrary, have they not aided and abetted that government in handing us over, bag and breeches, to the Canadian Pacific's tender mercies? Have the 'local shippers' of Victoria made a single effort to compel the Dominion postal authorities to give the Kootenay Lake country adequate mail facilities? No! Yet, Postoffice Inspector Fletcher is a citizen of and a resident in Victoria."

The Hudson's Bay Meeting.

In another part of this paper we give a full report of the proceedings at this meeting. Though the time taken up by them was unduly long, what took place may be described in few words. That the board was authorized to put [illegible] a plan for increasing the shares on the basis which parliament may lay down for railway companies. Such plan is to be submitted to the shareholders in due course, accompanied by the proposed amendments in the charter which such duplication may render necessary.

This will apparently be accepted by those who began the recent agitation, and it cannot be reasonably opposed, we think, by any section of the proprietors; but it was made quite evident that more had been in view by Mr. McLean and his friends. Mr. McLean expressed, at Tuesday's meeting, his preference for the issue of £1,000,000 4 per cent. debenture stock; but that would mean making the whole capital £2,000,000, and would involve a claim for arrear-interests, which—as was at once pointed out by Mr. Thomas Skinner—might be most damaging to the interests of the Company.

Admiral Field's amendment amounted to little beyond a demonstration against what some shareholders regard as too great pressure from Mr. McLean and his friends.—Canadian Gazette.

CROSSED THE DIVIDE.

Frederick Stelts, an Old Cariboo Miner, Dies This Morning.

Early this morning Mr. Frederick Stelts, a well-known pioneer of this Province, passed away after an illness extending over a long period during which time he has suffered greatly but through which he preserved a patient bearing.

In 1860 he came to this city, and was employed for a time at the New England bakery, at that time run by his brother George. Shortly after he went to Harrison Lake to prospect for silver, but was not fortunate, and returned to Victoria. In 1862 he went to Cariboo, and was interested in several claims, among them the Lightning, but did not make any stake to speak of. Although one of the first to open up that wonderfully rich country he was not fortunate. An instance may be cited in the case of the Lightning claim. After working it for considerable time at a loss, it was sold out, and the new purchasers made a big strike a few feet further down. The deceased was also at Williams Creek with his brother George. In 1871 both returned to Victoria and started the bakery and restaurant on Yates street, which the brothers ran most successfully until 1883, when the failing health of Friederick compelled him to retire, Mr. John Pelletier, his brother-in-law, buying his interest. Since that time he has never been well, and although his death has been expected, it was in a measure sudden. His only relations are a brother, Mr. Geo Stelts, and a sister, Mrs. John Pelletier.

SAND-BAGGED.

Mr. Reay, of North Saanich, Nearly Beaten to Death Last Week.

An assault on an old and well-known resident of North Saanich, which took place on Thursday night last, would undoubtedly have had a fatal termination but for the fortunate noise made by a passing wagon, which scared away the would-be murderers. About ten o'clock on the night mentioned, Mr. Wm. Reay heard a noise in the direction of his stables, and supposing that something was wrong with the horses, he went out to investigate. Near the corner of the stable he was struck down by a sand bag, and before becoming unconscious from the terrible beating that he received, he was able to distinguish two assailants, but could not see them distinctly enough to again recognize them. The noise of a passing wagon frightened the scoundrels who ran away and left the old man just as his brother came out to see what the noise meant. There is no clue to who the assailants were, excepting that a bottle of Jamaica ginger, dropped by one of them, leads to the suspicion that they were half-breeds. The object is supposed to have been robbery. The Messrs. Reay, who are old men, are known to be very wealthy, and it is supposed that the assailants thought that they kept considerable money in the house, and that by overpowering or murdering the brothers, who live together, that they would secure it. Mr. Reay is still confined to his bed, and being an old man it would not be surprising if the beating had a fatal termination. At present, however, he is expected to recover.

THE WELLINGTON STRIKE.

A Few Laborers Go to Work—The Miners as Determined as Ever.

When the miners were turned out of the houses of the company at Wellington last month, fifteen laborers, who used to work at the pit head, were allowed to remain. But on Friday the laborers were notified that they would have to either quit the houses or go to work. The men took the latter course, and on Friday morning they went to work in the pit, and took out five car loads, most of which was mined by the firemen who have been in the pit all along. The laborers, for they are not miners nor strikers, went to work again on Saturday and took out several train loads. This morning just as they were going to work, about two hundred of the Belgian miners, with banners flying, marched through the streets of Wellington, singing, to show the laborers and mine owners that they were still solid in spite of the fact that reports were current that they also were going to work. The men then marched to Nanaimo, where a meeting of all the miners in the district was held. A gentleman resident of Wellington, who arrived down to-day, says that the miners are as determined as ever and are noticeably orderly. There is not the slightest sign of any break in the ranks of the men, and both the association and the owners are determined that their side is right. The foreign miners are holding out longer than was expected, but now they seem to be surer of the success of the men than their brother miners. Quite a little town has sprung up at Northfield, where the miners are camped and where they are building houses.

DROWNED AT SEATTLE.

On Sunday afternoon Postmaster Shakespeare received a telegram from the Seattle coroner, that the body of his son Harry, has been found in Seattle harbor, but no particulars of the accident were sent. The deceased is the second son of Postmaster Shakespeare, and was aged 21 years. He was well known in Victoria and worked at the Albion Iron Works until about three weeks ago when he went to Seattle. His brother, F. Shakespeare, and F. Berryman, his brother-in-law, went over by the Kingston last evening and will return this evening, with the body. The boiler shop of the Albion Iron Works will close down to attend the funeral, the hour of which will be given.

The TIMES wired to Seattle for the particulars of the accident, and received the following:

SEATTLE, Aug. 4.—Harry Shakespeare, a boiler maker, who up to August 1st was employed in Moran Bros. Company's machine shops, fell into the harbor at the junction of Commercial and Plummer streets, near the Puget Sound steam laundry yesterday morning at three o'clock and was drowned. Shakespeare roomed in the Dry Dock Lane House at Seattle dry dock. He had been employed but a short time in Moran Brother's Company shop and came in to this city from Victoria three months ago. Shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday morning he started for his room and when near Commercial and Plummer streets lost his balance and fell over the edge of the wharf into the water, where the unfortunate man was drowned. He did not make much noise, and no one heard him call for help.

Typhoid Fever.

A little son of Mr. Cruickshanks, residing on Frederick street, was to-day taken to the Jubilee hospital, suffering from typhhoid fever, and the physicians in charge say that the disease was caused by bad drainage.

Effective Scenery.

The stage setting for the "Wicked World" to-night, has a remarkably pretty effect. The scene represents a part of cloudland, where a fairy bower has been fitted up. Here the mortals and immortals meet. The manner of leaving the stage is also very neat. Instead of going off by the wings, the actors drop through the clouds, the illusion being a very perfect one. The scene has been designed, painted and set by Mr. Wm. Neil, and is a most creditable one.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

The Trans-Pacific Steamer.

Unfortunately the P. M. S. S. Co.'s steamer China, the first of the trans-Pacific boats to touch at Victoria, was late arriving off the outer wharf on Saturday, it being half-past ten p.m. before she came to an anchor, instead of noon as was intended. Had she arrived in daylight it is more than likely that a large number of our citizens would have been at the outer wharf to wish the gallant ship bon voyage, but the lateness of the hour made this impossible. As the China was drawing 28 feet, she was not brought alongside, but the outgoing passengers and mails were put on board by the launch Hollyhank. Fourteen Chinese passengers who had been refused a landing at San Francisco came up on the China, and after paying the $50 tax, came ashore here. There was no freight for the China from this port this time, but the next boat which calls will get a large lot. The inward steamer City of Peking is expected here in about eight days more, with one hundred Chinese and considerable freight.

NAUTICAL NOTES.

Items of Interest Along the Water Front.

The steamer Mischief, with a cargo of coal, left for Yaquina to-day.

The C. P. S. chartered steamer Belle Isle from Hong Kong passed up last evening. She took Pilot Urquhart on board.

On the last down trip from Bute inlet the steamer Rainbow lost a blade of her propeller. It is now being replaced.

By the wreck of the steamer Etta White chief engineer Greenshields lost property to the value of $200, including a gold watch and chain and $50 in cash.

Chief Engineer Steele of the government dredge went to Chemainus yesterday to inspect the boiler of the steamer Daisy, by order of Collector Milne. Mr. Steele found that a few repairs would put the steamer in trim for service, and will so report to the department. It was necessary for some engineer to be sent up, as the position of steamboat inspector is just now vacant, and Mr. Steele was selected.

SAYS IT WAS ACCIDENTAL.

Mrs. Routledge Describes How Joseph Dougan was Shot.

Permission having been granted by the authorities, a TIMES reporter had a chat with Mrs. Routledge, who is at the provincial jail on the charge of shooting Joseph Dougan, near McPherson's station on Saturday morning last.

The prisoner, on being asked, said she should like to see the TIMES reporter, and accordingly was brought into the jail office by the attendant officer. She is a woman of perhaps 45 years of age, of pleasant appearance, and the last person in the world one would think capable of murder. Her face bore the mark of weeping, and while telling her story she frequently broke down and wept piteously, for the man who is dead she says she loved better than anything on earth. Being asked to explain how the unfortunate affair came about, she said: "Poor Joe had been drinking heavily for a few days previous, and on Saturday morning he started for the store to get more whiskey. I told him that he had had enough, and was not to go for any more, but he was obstinate and would go. He went out to the horse and carriage, which was ready, and went to get into the carriage. I noticed the rifle lying in the bottom of the carriage, and asked him what it was doing there. He said 'I don't know. Take it inside,' and with that passed me the rifle. I thought it was unloaded as I could have sworn I saw one of the boys take the cartridge out the night before. As Joe gave the gun to me, he said joking-like, 'Now shoot me,' and I replied 'you wouldn't say that if it was loaded.' I turned around then, quick like, carrying the gun so, (illustrating) and while my back was to him it went off. Joe cried out 'My God, I'm shot,' and fell into my arms, dying almost instantly. Oh, poor Joe, poor Joe,"—and here Mrs. Routledge broke down completely.

She afterwards stated that when the shot was fired the children came running out of the house, and that she sent the eldest to Mr. Foster's, the magistrate, to get assistance. "I called on him for God's sake to speak to me," she said. "Oh, if he had only heard to say one word, and him the only one I loved, and now he's gone."

After the accident Mrs. Routledge says she stayed close to the body until the assistance came she had sent for. After the inquest, when a charge of manslaughter was preferred, she was brought down to Victoria and placed in the jail to await trial. "I did not kill him intentionally," she said. "If I had I would not have staid close to him all alone there. Oh, I wish I was with him now," and the heart-rending sobs showed that the unfortunate woman is aware of the awful plight she is in. On being asked what kind of a rifle it was that caused the trouble, she replied that it was one which went off very easy, the least shock or jar causing it to explode. In several instances had this happened in the past, and one or two narrow escapes had been had.

Mrs. Routledge has been living in a "morganatic" way with the deceased for six years. She has four children, of whom Dougan was the father of one, the youngest, a girl four years old. The others, two boys and a girl, are 13, 15 and 16 years of age respectively. She says that had she killed Dougan intentionally she would be prepared to [illegible] was one of the [illegible] sober, but when whiskey had the upper hand he was ugly and dangerous.

A Pleasure Trip.

On Saturday afternoon a party of clerks belonging to a Yates street wholesale house hired a boat at the "Ferry" with the intention of going to Esquimalt. But just after they rounded McCaulay's Point, they ran the boat on the beach with the intention of stretching their legs. Quite a little time was spent in wandering around and when they went back to their boat what was their dismay to find that she was high and dry, the tide having gone out. The boat weighs about five tons, and consequently the clerks, none of whom are used to hard work, decided to camp on the island for the night and be able to float off in the morning. In the morning, however, the tide was lower than ever, and from four o'clock in the morning until ten o'clock, they tugged away at the five tons, moving it to the water inch by inch. Their misfortunes were not over, however, when the boat was in the water, for what is the use of sails if there is no wind, and the tired crowd had to take to the oars and row home. The boys intend hereafter to keep well out from shore when they go "sailing" again.
